RationaleThe Wajir process leading to the AI Fatah declaration took place in a context of a persistent practice of signing local agreements but it was not supported by a formal structured process. The process was initiated and driven by local community activists, even though later there was buy-in from the Red Cross, and then the government.Is there a documented link to a national peace process?NoLink to national process: articulatedThe agreement relates specifically to local incidences of cross-border violence and insecurity, and makes no reference to a national peace process. Nor do accounts of the process by peacebuilders involved in the Wajir peace process.Name of LocaleWajirRegion1.750391, 40.057224Participant typeCentral state actor Local state actor Local armed group hinternational or transnational actor Domestic religious organisation/leader or other elder Local community/civilian group(s)/civil society organisations Regional state actorMediator (references)Not mentioned in the agreement, but according to Abdi and Mason (2019) the process was mediated firstly by an informal women's group, then local, non-aligned tribes, and finally the state became involved as a third party. Grievance List	 Page 1, Untitled preamble (a) Taking stock of the increasing intensity of inter-clan fighting between the major clans in Wajir district and especially between Degodia and the Ajuran clans which have continued to claim lives of tens of people, many of them children, women, and innocent; (b) Considering one increasing insecurity in the district in which violent robberies, looting if property and highway robberies affecting them major roads connecting Wajir and Nairobi have continued to take place with alarming frequencies; (c) Dismayed with the recent callous murder of the late Jeff Buttler and the serious injury of Bob McCarthy both working with UNICEF and the subsequent suspension of NGO activities in the district; (d) apprehensive of the imminent danger posed for the entire district the banditry menace and clan clashes.
Cattle rustling/ banditry	 Page 1, 2. That during this cease fire, livestock stolen from Ogaden clans by Degodia and vice versa be mutually returned within 7 days effective from 1st October 1993. Page 1, 4. That Wajir people without distinction will work as a united people to liminate the banditry menace in the district. To realize this, the government is urged to work closely with the various panel of peace committees from the district headquarters to the sublocation level, who will monitor the implementation of this peace agreement and advice the authorities in the best method of eliminating the banditry menace.
	 Page 1, 7. That from the date of this ceasefire, the traditional law pertaining to blood feud will apply to those who commit murder namely the payment of hundred camels for a man and fifty camels for a women. In the case of stock theft, the rule of collective punishment involving a whole group of people will be applied. Page 2, 10. That the Provincial Administration being the executive [illegible] of the government, should instill discipline and sense of duty in the Security personnel as well as Chiefs and District Officers, so that officer working in areas where banditry menance will appear to increase instead of decrease after the implementation of this peace agreement will be responsible.
Social cover	Page 2, 12. That the government considers the formation of a specific force to be deployed specifically for the purpose of fighting the banditry menace. It is recommended that task force comprise mainly local officers from administration and police force. No specific mention.
